Newsday article - Navy/Northrop-Grumman, Bethpage NY: The main focus of the article, dated February 18, 2021, by reporters Paul LaRocco and David M. Schwartz, is the conclusion that Northrop-Grumman was aware of the groundwater contamination as far back as 1976, but that it did little or nothing to control its spread, which now is several miles wide and extends as deep as 900 feet below ground surface (bgs). A link to the article is included, as follows: [HYPERLINK "https://projects.newsday.com/long-island/plume-grumman-navy/" \h]. Mr. Schwartz was the requester of one of three active FOIAs in R2 pertaining to the Northrop-Grumman plume. Several key players with whom EPA has interacted on this project were interviewed in the video which accompanied this article.
